NEW YORKERS MUST WAIF.

NO IMPORTANT APPOINTMENTS TO BE MADE FOR SOME TIME YET,

State S nator McClelland Sees the Prestan Application for the Collectorship-J. H. Bugley of Catakill the Last Applicant. WASHINGTON, May 5 .- The statement made last night by Secretary Lamont that the President is too busy with other matters to take up the New York appointments was confirmed to-day, and if Messrs, Poucher, McClelland, Mowry. Brown. Monroe and others who arrived in Washington yesterday expect immediate action in connection with the Collectorship, instmastership and other Federal offices they may be disappointed. State Senator Mc-Cicliand was the only member of the "antispanier" contingent who visited the White House this morning. He was evidently not aware that only Congressmen and accompanying friends are admitted to see the President on Tuesdays and Fridays-Cabinet days-end by the merest accident he escaped being barred out. He stopped in the corridor talk with some newspaper men, and Representative N. M. Curtis of the Ogdensburg district came along and volunteered to Representative Amos Cummings called on the President, while Mr. McCleiland was waiting for an audience, and had a friendly talk on general tories. Mr. Cummings is just back from a fishing trip in Florida, and his skin is as brown as that of an Indian. The President listened to several new fish stories by Mr. Cumminus, and expressed a wish that he might have an opportunity to try conclusions with a few eight and ten-pound sea bass. Incidentally Mr. Cummings called the attention of the President to the reports that the New York appointments were about to be made. He said he would like to have an opportunity, at the proper time, to present the claim of a worthy man who aspires to the Collectorship of Internal Revenue in New York city. The President assured Mr. Cummings that he had no intention of considering the New York appointments at this time. It is quite provable that action may be deferred until about the last of July.

that action may be deferred until about the last of July.

Another aspirant for the Collectorship has appeared in the field. The records of the Treasury Department show that J. H. Pagley of Catskill wants to be Collector of the Port of New York. His application was recorded today, in addition to the following applications from citizens of New York: John Finite of Brooklyn, to be a special agent of the Treasury: Warren Dow of Randolph, to be a chief of division in the Treasurer's office; C. C. Van Santon of Brooklyn, to be a clerk in the Immigration Bureau at Ellis Island; F. G. Hoveli of Rayone, N. J., to be inspector of customs at New York.

As private secretary to the Postmaster-General he receives an annual salary of $1,800.

CALLERS AT THE WHITE HOUSE.

Some Go Away Satisfied-Hoke Goes to the Cabinet Meeting on Horseback.

WASHINGTON, May 5 .- Among the early callers at the White House to-day was Reprosentative Catchings of Mississippi, Speaker Crisp's lieutenant in the House and Chairman of the Committee on Rules. He had a short but satisfactory interview with the President, for later in the day a friend of Mr. Catchings was appointed Collector of Customs at Vicksburg, his home.

on of West Virginia also made a profitable call to-day. As is well known, the entire delegation from that State has persistently urged the President to appoint the widow of Senator Kenna to the postmastership at Charleston. W. Va. When Messrs Faulkner and Wilson called at the White House this morning the President informed them that he had concluded to dispose of the Charleston matter and thereupon appointed Mrs. Kenna. Immediately there was a foot race for the tele-graph office between the two West Virginians francial control of being the first to offer congratulations to the appointee.

Senators Ransom of North Carolina, and Mitchell of Wisconsin, accompanied by constituents, had brief interviews with the Presi-stiuents, had brief interviews with the President, the former to introduce an applicant for the office of Public Printer, and the latter to introduce Mr. Somerr, who was elected to the House in place of Senator Mitchell.

Representatives Curtis of New York, Fithian of Illinois, Bankhead of Alabama, and Cummings of New York, also had a few words with the President. Judge E. Henry Larcombe of New York called to pay his respects, and in the pame of the New York Judiciary thank the President for placing the revenue steamer Grant at their disposal during the recent naval review.

Grant at their disposal during the recent naval review.

Secretary Morton was the first member of the Cabinet to arrive. He was accompanied by two friends, who wished to have a few words with the President before the Cabinet convened. Postmaster-General Bissell, Attorney-General Olney, and Secretary Herbert met on the portico a few minutes before 11, and as they paused to exchange the usual greetings the clatter of horses' hoofs were heard on the asphalt. A moment later Secretary Hoke Smith, mounted on his Georgia bay, dashed up to the front door and dismounted with the case and grace of a thorough horseman.

The other members of the Cabinet cast admiring glances at their colleague as he tossed the lines to a skilled laborer from the Interior Department, who had been detailed to come to the White House and look after his chief's horse. The trio congratulated Mr. Smith on his hersemanship. Secretaries Gresham, Lamont, and Carlisle soon followed, and in a few minutes the President and his advisers were assembled around the Cabinettable.

PEARY'S POLAR EXPEDITION. He Will Start in June and Take the Same

WASHINGTON, May 5 .- Lieut. Peary, the explorer, has been in Washington for the past few days, suffering from a severe cold contracted while lecturing. He will leave tomorrow for St. Johns, N. eight months, while the average term served by the twenty-eight Postmasters removed during the last two months was three years and four months.

State Senator William Brown called at the White House last this afterneon and had a long talk with the Fresidont. It is probable that New York polities was the subject of their conversation, although Mr. Brown insists that he is here for a few days recreation and is not bethering himself about polities.

Smith M. Weed, Representative Pitch, and exclose Hugh S. Thompson arrived here this evening on the limited. To-night Secretary Lamont entertained a number of gentiamen in his apartments at the Arlington, and it is said that Mr. Weed and several of the leading "anti-spappers" now in Washington were among the guests.

PULLED THE TRIGGER IN FUN.

Frank Roaske, a blacksmith, lives with his wife, Mary, in a little cottage just across the railroad track from the station at Carlstadt, N. The blacksmith shop, a rambling, one-story building, stands a few feet away from the dwelling. Mr. Boeske, who is 35 years old, is very domestic in his ways. On Thursday night and joked with his wife while she was washing the supper dishes. He has a revolver and he had taught his wife to handle it almost as well as himself. While they were talking he got this revolver, for some reason, and when he was done looking at it he laid it on the table, telling his wife as a precaution on the table, telling his wife as a precaution that it was not loaded. About 10 o'clock the couple went up stairs. As she passed the table Mrs. Roeske picked up the revolver. When she reached her room she sat down in a chair and pointed the revolver at various objects in the room, practising her eve in aiming. Her husband was preparing for bed. Finally Mrs. Roeske turned the muzzle of the weapon toward him and said in a toking way:

"If this was loaded, do you know I could shoot you?"

"Shoot away," laughed Rocske, without turning his head.

Mrs. Boeske pulled the trigger. The weapon was discharged and without a word the thick smith staggered backward a few steps, threw up his arms, and fell at his wile's feet unconscious. The builet had entered his head just behind the right ear.

Mrs. Roeske rushed to the window and aroused the neighborho d with screams for assistance. Several neighbors hurried to the house. They found the half-crazed woman kneeling beside her husband begging him to speak to her. The injured man was put on the hed and a doctor sent for. When he had come and had examined the wound, he shook his head and said that he feared the wound was morial. All night long he remained by the unconscious man, while Mrs. Roeske paced backward and forward in the room below, wringing her hands and paying no attention to the words of sympathetic neighbors. Yesterday morning, when the doctor had found that he could not extract the bullet, he advised that Mr. Roeske be brought to this city. The doctor came with the figured man to this city on the 11 o'clock train.

It could not be learned last night to what hospital Mr. Roeske had been taken, but the latest news from Carlistadt gaye no hope of his Il o'clock train.

MRS. HARRIS SEES HER SON.

HER FIRST VISIT SINCE HE HAS BEEN IN THE DEATH CHAMBER.

Was Nothing for Him but to Die Bravely, Conscious of His Innocence-The Execution Likely to Take Place Early Monday The mother and the brother of Carlyle W. Harris saw him yesterday for the first time since the law's decree had been irrevocably confirmed. They spoke to him through screen and cell bars, and bade him hope. They told him that the end had not yet come, and that there were still chances of saving his life. But he only shook his head and said that all there was left for him now was to propare to die bravely, fully conscious of his innocence. Their visit only lasted two hours. After they had gone he sat quietly in his cell waiting for the day to end with that calmness, which, in his case it has become almost trite to speak of.

Mrs. Harris and her son Allan left Northfield. Mass., at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon. They travelled by train and boat all night long, and arrived at Sing Sing a few minutes before noon. A crowd had collected at the station to see this mother who had suffered and sacrifleed so much for her son. She stopped feebly from the cars and walked into the waiting room. Her face was pale and haggard and her decrepit bearing was pitiful to see. Allan, her son, who is several years younger than Carlyle, was deathly pale too, and his face was drawn with lines that betokened deep suffering. a carriage, to which he led his mother. The curious crowd and the clamorous gang of hack drivers became quiet, and fell back to make way for them. Allan helped his mother into the vehicle, and while, his foot was vet on the step, the driver whipped the horses and off the carriage sped.

As the gray walls of the prison came into view Mrs. Harris burst into sobs. Allan placed his arm around her quivering form and drew her head upon his shoulder. Thus they sat when the carriage reached the entrance to the prison. Alian jumped out and helped his mother to the ground. She took his arm and they walked into the Warden's office.

Warden Durston was not in the office at the moment, having gone into the prison to look ofter some repairs. Superintendent of Prisons Lathrop, who was waiting for the Warden, took Mrs. Harris by the hand and led her to a chair. Warden Durston came in a few minutes later and after a short greeting requested Mrs. Harris and her son to follow him.

"I must reques' you, madam," the Warden said, "not to break down in your son's presence. It will be better for both of you."
"All right, Warden," Mrs. Harris replied,

"All right, Warden," Mrs. Harris replied, calmis. "I will not break down."

They descended the stone steps to Keeper Connaughton's office. From there they all went to the office of Trison Chaplain John C. S. Weills. Here alian remained with the Warden, while his mother and Keeper Connaughton entered the death house.

Keeper Connaughton had sent word to the guards who were on duty before the cells of the condemned men that visitors were coning. All the screens were instity pulled down, so that none of the prisoners could be seen. As soon as the visitors entered the room the screen in front of harris cell was raised and Harris saw his mother.

The keeper moved the wire netting that stretches across the room, so that Mrs. Harris could reach her hand through and class her son's. A chair was then brought for her, and she sat down and talked with the condemned for an hour, and a half. After she came out Allen went in and spoke with his brother for half an hour. When he came out he said to the reporters:

"I found Carl looking better than when I

the reporters:

"I found Carl looking better than when I saw him last. He snoke about the case for some time. I told him that all hope was not ret gone, but he said: "Oh, what is the use? They are trying to hurry me off as fast as they can. It wouldn't make any difference if we found a witness who saw her buy the fatal dose she took that night. They are bound to hurry me off anyway."

"He said to me." Allen went on. "'If you see any reporters I wish you would say to them that I still assert my innocence, and that I am still as firm in asserting it as I was on the day I want to the District Attorney's office and said: "If you want me, here I am." I feel as brave and as strong as I have felt all through this case, and I shall endeavor to die as bravely as I have lived through it all "A larks remained in the Warden's office with Mrs. Durston for some time, and then she and her son entered the earriage and drove off. They went to Henry W. Ambler's boarding house on tate street, where they will remain until the execution takes place.

Warden lurston has not yet told when the execution will take place, but everybody expects that it will be early Monday morning. The list of people who will be present has been completed, but their names were not given out. A story was published yesteriar to the effect that Dr. Irvine, the prison physician, examines all the letters that Harris receives for traces of poison. This is not true. Dr. Irvine said:

"I have feld the chaplain, who is the only

It is possible to convey poisons like arsenic, prussic acid, or hydrocyanic acid through paper that has been saturated and dried, but Harrig has never reurated and dried, but Harris has never re-ceived any letter of that kind."

day before going to Sing Sing and asked if something could not be done to save Carrylo from execution.

"Mrs. Harris," said Mr. Howe, "if I thought there was the slightest ray of hope to save your son's life I would make an apreal to the I nited States Supreme Court. Feeling as I do that there is no hope. I cannot make a mock of the laws by such action. I can do nothing more for Carl. If i did it would simply bring torture to you and to your son."

Mrs. Harris said that she agreed with the lawser that there was nothing to do but to let the judgment of the Court be executed. Mr. Howe said she added that she is satisfied that Governor Flower in his docision had declared Harris innocent because "he says that proof was given on the hearing before Mr. Raines which established that Helen Potts was in the habit of taking morehine for medicinal purposes."

"Before we appealed to Recorder Smyth." Mr. Howe quoted Mrs. Earris as saying. "the prosecution denied that Helen took morphine. I say that if the Governor did find she had taken morphine medicinally, who is to say she had not acquired the habit of taking it, as many other women do, and that a self-administered dose did not take her off? At all events. I am satisfied that Carl will die with his innocence proclaimed."

The idea of proving her son's innocence of Helen Potts's murder, rather than the saving of his life, seems to have been uppermost in the mother's mind. She says that his innocence has been established to her satisfaction.

RASH, Young Mr. Wilkinson of Baltimore Comre IMPURE BLOOD Here to Indulge His Taste for Opium,

On Wednesday night a young man came to the Hotel Brunswick and registered as J. S. Wilkinson of Paltimore. He brought no baggage with him, and went to his room immediately. A few moments later he sent down a message that he wanted either opium or cocaine as he was nervous and could not sleep. Word was sent back that it was impossible at that hour to get either of the drugs, and the young man remained quietly in his room. On the next day he left the hotel in the morning. and returned a few moments later and went to

When he was next seen in the office he was very much under the influence of opium. He said that he was a son of Walter Wilkinson, a wealthy railroad man of Baltimore. Young Wilkinson admitted that he had been sent to the Mount Hope Asylum in Baltimore to be cured of the opium habit, and had escaped from the institution on We-inesday afternoon. A telegram was sent to Walter Wilkinson informing him of his son's whereabouts. He telegraphed back asking the hotel people to persuade his son for turn nome.

When informed of his father's despatch he consented to return home, and on Thursday afternoon he was escrited to the Cortlandt street ferry by a detective from the hotel. A few moments after the detective returned to the hotel Wilkinson reappeared and announced that he had changed his mind. After walting several hours about the hotel he disappeared. It is thought that he has returned to Baltimore or been taken in charge by very much under the influence of opium. He New London, May 5.-Miss Clara A. Sibley. and had telegraphed Breen to meet her. Immediately her parents in Bridgeport were telegraphed to and at once they telegraphed to the police in this city to arrest her.

When the train arrived at the depot, Policeman Jeffers was there. He had no trouble in picking out Miss Sidey, and took her to the police station. She was detained there until the departure of the 3:10 o'clock train for Bridgeport. She was put on board, and her father was notified. She appeared to be penistent and willing to go home. She told Police Capt. White that she preferred to go to Providence and work at the milliner's trade, but if he insisted she would go right to Bridgeport. When the train arrived in Bridgeport she was not on hoard. Her parents became distracted and began telegraphing to the police of the neighboring cities at once. They believed that the girl had committed suicide and thought she had thrown herself into Long Island Sound. They will be relieved to learn that although she was shipped west on a train by the police, she was back to New London within an hour, and shortly after 5 o'clock boarded a train for Providence and was whirled myst on her lover. She left the Bridgeport-bound train at Saybrook. She telegraphed Breen that she was delayed and when to look for her. It is believed that they were married yesterday in Providence. SAN FRANCISCO, May 5.- Having just escaped from a Mexican prison, where he had been unjustly confined for ten years, George W. Weland started this morning for his home in Boston, where his wife now is. A little more than ten years ago Mr. Wellington married a handsome young lady in Boston, and soon afterward he accepted the position of railway sta-tion agent at Chihuahua, Mexico. His wife followed him, and on the way attracted the attention of Ramoa Gonzales, a Mexican army officer. She refused to listen to him, but he continued his importunities after her arriva-in Chihuahua, and laughed at Weilington's

One evening Wellington went home and found his wife struggling with Gonzales, who was attempting to assault her. Wellington shot the Mexican dead, He gave himself up to the local authorities, and was tried forthwith, not being allowed to make a statement or to large his wife's testimony heard. He was convicted, and was at first sentenced to death, but the judgment was reduced to penal servitude for life. For ten years he worked as a convict quarry laborer, being repeatedly flogged, but about thirteen days ago a friend named Henry French bribed a guard, and Wellington got away. He reached San Diego two days ago, and at once came up the coast on his way home. This trief story of his life he told to Edward Howell, an old acquaintance whom he met in Oakland. Suicide at Sen of a Boston Man Who Had PORTLAND, Me., May 5,-The steamer Tremont arrived from Poston this morning. The committed suicide by jumping overboard last night near the Isle of Shoals. Lovell was about 50 years old, and was employed in the Boston Custom House. He was seen to jump from the rail. The steamer was at once stopped, but no sign of the missing man was seen. The sea was so rough that a hoat could not be lowered. In his stateroom was found the following note:

We'are now off and shall be out far enough in two bonts. It seems strange, but I have not tile least dread of death. I am sorry or course, to part with friends.

When two miles out he was accosted by a stranger, who insisted that Mr. Ham should go with him to a saicon, near by, and take a drink. This Mr. Ham declined to do. CITY OF MEXICO, May 5.-An effort is being nade by the public and press of Mexico to secure the passage of a bill by the National clined to do.

The stranger followed Mr. Ham, and took a bottle of liquor from his pocket and insisted that he should drink Mr. Ham consented, and soon atterward he became dazed and sank to the ground. When he regained consciousness he found that he had been robbed of over $1,400 in money and a gold watch. Mr. Ham managed to reach his home, and this morning he reported his loss to Sheriff Liddle. Congress, regulating duels. The large number of affairs of honor which have taken place here during the last few weeks, and their bloodless character has called for the general protest against the practice as now in effect.

It is proposed to enact a law regulating duels so as to make them as dangerous as possible. This law will prescribe the kind of weapons to be used and make the distance so short that one or both of the principals will be certain to be killed or badly wounded. It will also prescribe that the affair cannot be ended until one of the principals is wounded. It is also prescribe that the abair cannot be enlied until one of the principals is wounded. It is believed that such a law will do more toward suppressing duels in Mexico than the enforce-ment of the present law imposing penalties for dueling. He Thinks the Union League Should Have Helped Him Into the Assembly. Simon Hess, brother of Charles A. Hess,

Music and Recitations at the Brunswick was reported in THE SUN of yesterday, said Mile, Latafile, a noted Parisian lecturer and elocutionist, gave a musical and literary rebrother's lead and resign from the Ropublican organization to-day. In answer to the plea that the Union League Club did not represent the party in blackballing Theodore Seligman because of his creed. Mr. Hess said:

"If the club does not represent the party, why is it deemed necessary to submit all Ropublican nominations, national, State, city, and district, to it for approval? My own nomination for Assemblyman in the Twenty-first district was submitted to it last fall, and it took no action. If it had announced itself favorably I would probably have been elected."

Simon Hess is interested in the Custom House cartage contract.

Subway Commissioner, Jacob Hess said: "I lead, and never follow," which, being interpreted, is said to mean that his younger brothers are following him out of the G. O. P. brother's lead and resign from the Ropublican cital at the Hotel Brunswick resterday afternoon. She was generously assisted by Mr. Henry Marteau, whose appearance here has become a signal for enthusiastic applause, and a promise replete with charming possibilities. Among his selections were two of Wieniawski's compositions, a Chopin nocturne, and a remanus by Svendsen, which he played with equal delight. Miss C. Chandler, who was to sing, was ill and could not appear, and Miss Rosamend-Linnet filled her place.

An appreciative audience crowded the hotel parlor. It was largely composed of ladies who have been members of Mile. Latafile's French class since January, when she first came to this country. She soon returns to Paris to close her establishment there, and will come back to New York in the fail. Her recitations were finely given in French, but for the instruction of those who did not understand the language, she quaintly told each story in what she called her "foreign English." The programme concluded with the recitation of a poem composed by Mademoiselle Latafille and dedicated to Mr. Henri Marten, It was in part a dream or a reminiscence of a siege which occurred in 1420 at his particle song, adapted to the words. become a signal for enthusiastic applause.

RUBINO ADMITS HIS GUILT.

HE FLED FROM RUSSIA AFTER MUR-DERING A NEIGHBOR.

The Man Whom Young Kohlman Pointed Out to the Police on Thursday Makes a Confession-He Will Go Back for Trial. Jacob Friedman, the Russian Jew who was arrested on Thursday, accused of committing a murder in Russia, was fully identified yesterday by Abraham Kohlman of 411 Grove street, Jersey City, the father of the young man who caused Friedman's arrest. The prisoner was taken to the Russian Consul's man who caused Friedman's arrest. The prisoner was taken to the Russian Consul's office at 22 State street, where he made a compiete confession of his guilt. He was almost overcome with fear. With his hands chasped across his breast and his face turned upward, he exclaimed:

"My God! My God! I struck him, but I did not mean to kill him." Then he wept hysterically, When he regained his composure, he said: "My real name is Soloman Kopilowick Indian, and I come from the town of Sapotzkin in the province of Suiwalki, Russian Poland. I have a wife and six children. I was once prosperous and did a large milk business. All went well until six months ago, whon a man named I libe Libezak offered the dairy man from whom I rented my cows more money than I was paying, and I was deprived of my only means of livelihood. No one would sell me a cow, neither could I rent any, so up to four weeks ago I and my family had to live on what I had saved. It was nearly all gone wherh, one day just about Easter, I think it was April 29. I heard that two cows were for sale. I sent my sen into another county for one, and I went my self to a neighboring town for the other.

"On the road I met Lipezak, who, with his son Louis, was driving in a wagon. They were going my war, and invited me to ride with them. I took a place on the seat beside Lipezak. It was very dark, and as we drove along I said to him; Why did you deprive me and the county was mand he seemed weil and cheerful and then I said to him, why did you deprive me and the county was a sing and an above address and to the large and making either with a mand press and he seemed weil and cheerful and then lives of the transition of the date of the date of the mand to the large and making either with a more and the county of the county of

"On the road I met Liperak, who, with his son Louis, was driving in a wagon. They were going my way, and invited me to ride with them. I took a piace on the seat beside Liperak. It was very dark, and as we drove along I said to him: Why did you deprive me of my only means of support? You were rich, and could have got along well enough." Liperak became furious, and, calling me names, shat in my face. Then he struck me with his whip. I returned his blows with my waking stick, and Liperak fell from the wagon, striking on his head. I jumped out and ran away.

"I met my son on the road and told him. He advised him to go away. I hurried home, racked a few things, and, taking 110 of the 400 rubles that remained, I left the country. I did not mean to kill him, and did not know he had died."

I did not mean to kill him, and did not know he had died.

Young Kohlman then showed the letter he had received from his cousin in liussia telling of the crime. Why, "exclaimed the interpreter." this says that the man's son is in prison charged with the crime." Friedman cried like a child on hearing this, and shouted. Ite's innocent, he's innocent." Then he said he was willing to go back to flussia and give himself up to save his son.

Consul Olarovsky said that the newextradition treaty between the United States and itussia was not yet in force, and that unless the man went back voluntarily he didn't believe the Federal authorities would surrender him.
